0.0.1 Module 3 – OOP Packages Modules Try-Except

0.1 Case Study – 3

0.1.1 Approach to Solve the Problem

1. Read the FairDealCustomerData.csv file: Since the first row in the file appears to be data (and not a header), we will adjust the reading process.
2. Split the Name field: The name field contains the full name with the title, first name, and last name. We will use a regular expression to split the name properly.
3. Store the data in a Customer class: The data will be stored in an object-oriented structure using a Customer class.
4. Create a custom exception: We will create a custom exception CustomerNotAllowedException that will be raised when a customer is blacklisted (i.e., when the value in the third column is 1).
5. Create the createOrder function: This function will simulate the process of creating an order and will raise an exception for blacklisted customers.

[29]: import pandas as pd
import re

Step 1: Read the CSV file (without assuming a header)
customer_data = pd.read_csv('FairDealCustomerData.csv', header=None)

Rename the columns properly since the first row isn't a header
customer_data.columns = ['Last Name', 'Title, First Name', 'Blacklist']

Step 2: Define a function to clean up any leading/trailing whitespace or # invisible characters
def clean_text(text):
    return text.strip()

Step 3: Define a regular expression to split the name into Title and First # Name (including middle names)
def split_name(full_name):
    # Clean the full name text
    full_name = clean_text(full_name)

    # Updated regular expression to capture the title and first/middle names

    match = re.match(r"(Mr\.|Mrs\.|Miss\.|Dr\.|Don\.|Rev\.|Col\.|Master\.|Mme\.
↳|Ms\.|Major\.|Capt\.|Jonkheer\.|Mlle\.)\s+(.+)", full_name)

    if match:
        title = match.group(1) # Capture title (e.g., Mr., Mrs., etc.)
        first_name = match.group(2).strip() # Capture everything after the ↳title (e.g., first name + middle name)
        return title, first_name

    return None, None

Step 4: Define the Customer class
class Customer:
    def __init__(self, title, first_name, last_name, blacklist):
        self.title = title
        self.first_name = first_name
        self.last_name = last_name self.blacklist = blacklist

    def __repr__(self):
        return f"Customer({self.title} {self.first_name} {self.last_name}, ↳Blacklisted: {self.blacklist})"

Step 5: Define a custom exception for blacklisted customers
class CustomerNotAllowedException(Exception):
    def __init__(self, message):
        super().__init__(message)

Step 6: Function to create an order
def create_order(customer):
    if customer.blacklist == 1:
        raise CustomerNotAllowedException(f"Customer {customer.first_name} ↳{customer.last_name} is blacklisted and not allowed to place orders.") print(f"Order created for {customer.first_name} {customer.last_name}.")

Step 7: Process the data and simulate creating orders
customers = []

for index, row in customer_data.iterrows():
    #print(f"Processing: {row['Title, First Name']}")
    title, first_name = split_name(row['Title, First Name'])

    # Handle cases where name splitting doesn't work properly
    if not title or not first_name:
        print(f"Skipping customer with invalid name format: {row['Title, First
        continue

Clean up the last name and other fields
last_name = clean_text(row['Last Name']) blacklist_status = int(row['Blacklist'])

Create a Customer object
customer = Customer(title, first_name, last_name, blacklist_status)
customers.append(customer)

Display the customers
print("Customers loaded:")
for customer in customers:
    print(customer)

print("\nAttempting to create orders...\n")

Step 8: Simulate the order creation process
for customer in customers:
    try:
        create_order(customer)
    except CustomerNotAllowedException as e:
